

Defending press freedom since 1950

THIS IS WHO WE ARE. THIS IS WHAT WE DO.

The International Press Institute (IPI) is a global network of editors, journalists and media executives who share a common dedication to quality, independent journalism. We are an association of media professionals representing leading digital, print and broadcast news outlets in more than 100 countries.

Our mission is to defend media freedom and the free flow of news wherever they are threatened.

Our members support our work and activities around the world and strengthen our voice in defence of press freedom. They provide us with the knowledge and collective stature we need to ensure that journalists can work free from interference and without fear of retaliation.

Moreover, IPI membership offers solidarity in the face of oppression. Throughout its decades-long history, the strength of IPI's network has shielded journalists from attack or forced violators of media freedom to backtrack amid global exposure of their actions.

Through their participation in the IPI World Congress, IPI's main annual event, members contribute to the global debate on current and new challenges facing the media industry.

The IPI Community

IPI was founded in 1950 by 34 prominent editors from 15 countries who believed in the power of information to help build peace. Today, IPI's network of members remains our greatest strength and is what makes IPI different from other press freedom organisations. IPI members are at the core of our press freedom work.

Members share their contact details to facilitate networking and exchange of information among members all over the world. All IPI individual, corporate and institutional members thus have direct access to a network of like-minded media representatives around the world.

Members play an active role in shaping the organisation. All IPI members have voting rights and can participate at the IPI General Assembly, helping to define our advocacy priorities and supporting our campaigns as well as contributing to our research and monitoring work.

IPI campaigns for our members when they need us.

This is a community that stands together in solidarity to fight against any threat to press freedom.
